

Girls Who Do Interiors add “signs of life” into their work creating spaces that are beautiful and stand the test of time.

to contrast and layer different eras and influences together. That’s how we create something that feels both timeless and completely unexpected.

What’s one thing you’ll never compromise on for a client?

Quality, hands down. We want every space we design not only to look beautiful but also to stand the test of time. We’d rather have a client wait months for the perfect piece than fill their home with something that isn’t intentional or built to last.

What’s your secret must-have for turning a house into a home?

We look for “signs of life.” Whether it’s natural marbles that develop a beautiful patina over time or a vintage silver tray ready for evening cocktails, these elements aren’t just design choices—they’re invitations for our clients to embrace the rituals that make daily life feel special. That’s what transforms four walls into a real home.

COCHET PAIS DESIGN STUDIO;
@cochetpais

How would you describe your design aesthetic?

Our approach is guided by a clear vision—to create spaces where contemporary elegance meets timeless luxury. We pay particular attention to volume, light and materiality, imagining environments that breathe balance and serenity. Our signature embodies understated luxury, mastered modernity and an elegant art of living that transcends trends.

Is there a design rule you always follow, or one you always break?

Our rule is to start every creation by hand, with a pen. This allows us to shape the strong lines and define the key aesthetic codes of each project from the very beginning. Sketching gives us freedom and opens space for a deeper creative process, guided by instinct and emotion rather than constraints.

What’s one design “must” that makes a room feel complete

For us, a room feels complete when every element, from the accessories to the lighting and furniture, subtly echoes the interior design codes of the project. These final touches aren’t random; they act as refined nods to the project’s aesthetic language, reinforcing its identity and harmony.

What’s your secret must-have for turning a house into a home?

Our secret must-have is designing from the inside out, creating spaces that reflect how our clients live and feel. A house becomes a home when every line, every material, and every detail, from architecture to the smallest accessory, is shaped around their lifestyle.

The team at Cochet Pais Design ensures each project tells its own story, one that is discreet, refined, effortless and comfort, creating visual harmony.

